Worries over the health of the banking system on both sides of the Atlantic were the main preoccupation for investors in March. The yield on the 2-year US Treasury, which hit a peak of 5.06% prior to the turmoil in the banking sector, ended the month at 4.03%. While Asian investment grade was up, Asian high yield declined.

Monthly performance

In March the fund performed negatively with 3.7%. Fund returns were negatively affected by the pullback in the China property sector.

YTD performance

YTD as of the end of March, the fund has delivered a positive performance of 2.2%. Returns on the fund are still positive as it has benefited from the China reopening theme early in the year.

Performance contributors

The underweight in the financials sector and the overweight in quasi-sovereigns contributed positively to performance.

Performance detractors

The overweight in China real estate and the underweights in consumer and diversified sectors detracted from returns.

Current investment strategy

In light of the recent changes in the Chinese government's policy stance, we think the momentum for a recovery in the Asian credit market could continue. Nonetheless, volatility is expected given that there has been a sharp rally recently, and the road to full reopening will be bumpy.

Risks

Depending on the credit quality, the default risk is higher in the case of high yield bonds than with investment grade corporate and government bonds. Changes in interest and exchange rates have an effect on the value of the portfolio. This requires corresponding risk tolerance and capacity. All investments are subject to market fluctuations. Every fund has specific risks, which can significantly increase under unusual market conditions.

This share class (mdist) may make monthly, gross-of-fee distributions. As a consequence, in addition to income, this share class may also distribute capital. This can have negative tax consequences for investors in some jurisdictions. Investors should seek their own tax advice.
