

The new modern

Collectors embrace the future (sustainability) and value the classic (museums)

A new survey of US high net worth art collectors reveals they're optimistic about the art market. They're considering sustainable options in managing their collections and are willing to pay more for them. In addition, collectors continue to value the important roles of museums, with women more likely to leave some of their collection to them.

Most collectors are optimistic about art and stocks ...

... and they value sustainability

Concerned about carbon footprint of the art market

86% say they would pay more for sustainable options

and

25% say they would pay over 25% more for sustainable options

On buying and museums >

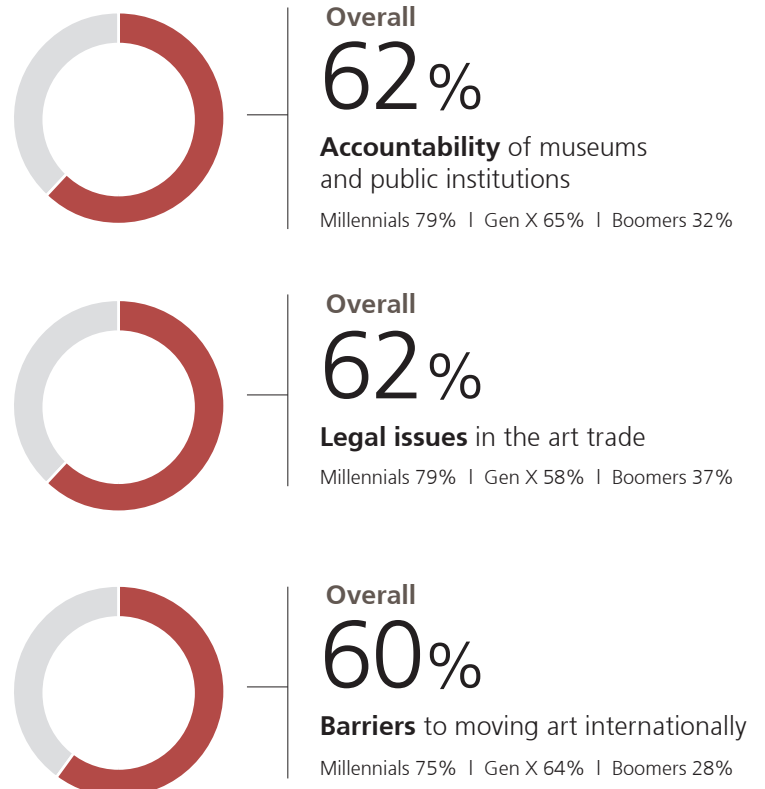

Where collectors prefer to buy

Museums play a valuable role

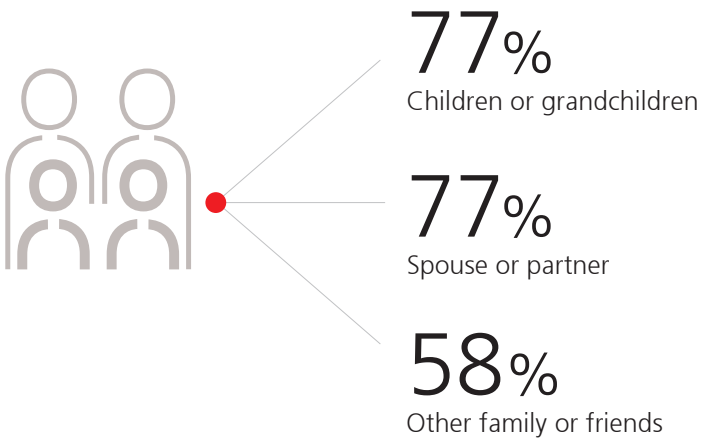

Top concerns

Mixed views on when to pass on their collection

Many plan to leave collection to family

"I've taken steps to show heirs how to manage my collection."

"I'm worried my heirs won't get a fair selling price."

Many also plan to leave art to institutions

Museums

Charitable organizations

Women spotlight

Women make more large art purchases

Women have larger collections

Women more likely to leave collection outside family

Plan to donate to museums

Plan to donate to charitable organizations

Women and younger generations have collections with slightly more gender diversity

Female collectors

Male collectors

Millennial collectors

GenX collectors

Boomer collectors

*Of artists with known gender

Are you making the most of your collection? Talk to your UBS Financial Advisor.

About the survey: UBS surveyed 404 investors in the US with $1 million in investable assets that had spent $10,000 or more on art and/or antiques in the past two years.

© UBS 2019. The key symbol and UBS are among the registered and unregistered trademarks of UBS. All rights reserved. UBS Financial Services Inc. is a subsidiary of UBS AG. Member FINRA/SIPC. Expiration: 11/30/2020 Review Code: IS1905939 Approval date: 11/27/2019 2019-216650