We plan to continue to go beyond our duty to protect the environment, respect human rights, continually improve our systems to become more efficient and effective, and ensure responsible behavior in all aspects of our operations. UBS expects the same from its suppliers.

Our cross divisional organization, UBS in society, focuses our firm on this direction. UBS in society covers all the activities and capabilities related to sustainable investing, philanthropy, environmental and human rights policies governing client and supplier relationships, our environmental footprint, as well as, community investment.

(b) Recognizing that there are different legal competitive and cultural environments in which UBS’s suppliers operate throughout the world, the UBS Responsible Supply Chain Standard serves as a benchmark for assessing ethical business practices of UBS’s suppliers and will be referenced within contractual agreements between UBS and its suppliers.

(c) Where gaps are identified between supplier practices and the UBS Responsible Supply Chain Standard, suppliers shall improve their practices in order to comply with the UBS Responsible Supply Chain Standard whilst meeting all other operating and engagement criteria.

(d) The UBS Responsible Supply Chain Standard incorporates standards on human rights, labor rights and environmental, and anti-corruption principles as set out in the UN Global Compact – which is derived from the Universal Declaration on Human Rights, the International Labor Organization’s Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, and the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. It supports the implementation of the principles stated in the UBS Group Policy Against Corruption and the UBS in society Constitutional Document.
