Economic overview

Global economic growth has continued to decelerate amid the uncertainty associated with trade and technology conflicts. The presence of ongoing geopolitical risks suggests the world economy is more likely to stabilize below trend in the second half of 2019 than above it. While we still expect the global economy to ultimately steady without a hard landing, it now looks to be slipping below trend over coming quarters.

Our view that a soft landing is achievable is built on resilience of developed economy labour markets and consumption, along with policy responses from the US Federal Reserve (Fed) and China to protect their economies. After inconsistent Fed rhetoric prompted fears of a US monetary policy mistake in late 2018, an unequivocally more accommodative Fed approach has emerged.

There was a high degree of anticipation amongst investors, ahead of the G20 meeting of major government leaders planned at the end of June. In the end, the burgeoning optimism could be seen as well founded as there was agreement to resume the stalled trade talks between the US and China. UK Prime Minister Theresa May's came to a close as she announced her intention to resign.

Fund manager comment

Following the FTSE quarterly review in June, no stocks were added to or deleted from the index, along with various changes in the shares in issue of the index constituents. Two way turnover totalled 5.25%.

Additionally, in May, FTSE updated a number of Weight Adjustment Factors (WAF) in the index. Two way turnover for this event totalled 0.68%.

Also during the quarter, but outside of the review, Newmont Mining Corp's weighting in the index increased following an acquisition of Goldcorp.

Activity in the Portfolio reflected these changes.
