How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Portfolio performance summary

What worked:

- Sector allocations to several strong-performing segments of the market, including corporate loans, asset-backed securities (ABS), high yield corporate bonds, commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS), and investment-grade corporate bonds contributed to performance.
- Security selection in high yield corporate bonds issued by midstream energy companies, technology companies and electric utilities alongside selection within investment-grade corporate bonds issued by life insurers, and consumer cyclical services companies' corporate loans contributed to results over the reporting period.
- Duration and curve positioning contributed to performance

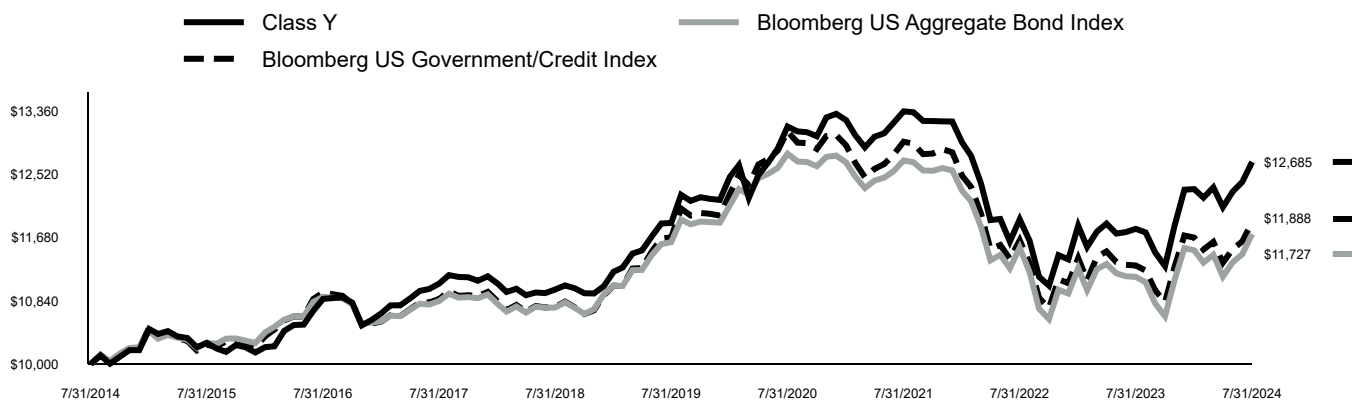

What didn't work:

- Relative selection results were weakest in investment-grade corporate bonds issued by banks, specialty real estate investment trusts (REITs), electric utilities, and healthcare corporate loans.
- Some CMBS single asset single borrower (SASB) names detracted from performance.
- Allocation to emerging market local currency bonds and curve positioning in Latin America, specifically Brazil and Mexico, detracted from performance.

During the reporting period, the portfolio utilized derivatives including currency forwards, interest rate futures, credit default swaps, and mortgage TBAs.
