Why the foundations supporting markets remain intact

17 August 2026, 14:02 UTC, written by UBS Editorial Team

Market calm rarely lasts forever and risks remain, including persistent geopolitical uncertainty.

Israel struck Lebanon over the weekend, with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu saying the strikes were in retaliation for an earlier Hezbollah attack. The path toward reopening the Strait of Hormuz remains unclear, while attacks between Russia and Ukraine have intensified again.

But the foundations supporting markets remain intact, in our view. Growth is holding up, earnings expectations are improving, and monetary policy may prove less restrictive than markets currently assume.

The US economy continues to show resilience. While July's retail sales fell for the first time in nine months and marked the biggest drop since May last year, overall US economic activity remains solid despite the sharp rise in oil prices. Credit card data in recent weeks have not shown much of a slowdown in spending, while the spending growth of lower-income households is catching up with that of higher-income consumers. Other recent data also point to resilience, with expanding factory activity suggesting an improving cyclical backdrop.

Corporate earnings have delivered the biggest positive surprise. Earnings growth expectations have risen sharply since the start of the year, reflecting stronger-than-anticipated profitability across corporate America. While earnings growth is unlikely to maintain its current pace indefinitely, revisions remain positive and corporate fundamentals are generally supportive. AI investment remains robust amid encouraging monetization, while strong earnings growth across sectors suggests a broadening of equity market participation.

The policy backdrop may become more supportive. Markets continue to price in more than one Fed hike over the next year. But the recent slew of US economic data has weakened the near-term case for rate hikes—payrolls fell, inflation moderated, and retail sales dropped. Our expectation is that incoming data should show continued disinflation, allowing the Fed to stay on hold and market pricing to move in that direction. A clearer indication of an extended pause this year would likely provide another tailwind for risk assets.

So, while volatility may pick up in the weeks and months ahead, we maintain a constructive outlook for risk assets into year-end. We continue to favor broadly diversified equity exposure across sectors and regions.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: This terminology refers to definitions in the UBS Sustainable Investing Framework and does not refer or relate to any product-specific regulatory labelling regime or naming conventions. Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit UBS's ability to participate in or to advise on certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with the Client's investment objectives. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by UBS, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.

Cautionary statement regarding forward-looking statements. This report contains statements that constitute “forward-looking statements”, including but not limited to statements relating to the current and expected state of the securities market and capital market assumptions. While these forward-looking statements represent our judgments and future expectations concerning the matters discussed in this document, a number of risks, uncertainties, changes in the market, and other important factors could cause actual developments and results to differ materially from our expectations. These factors include, but are not limited to (1) the extent and nature of future developments in the US market and in other market segments; (2) other market and macro-economic developments, including movements in local and international securities markets, credit spreads, currency exchange rates and interest rates, whether or not arising directly or indirectly from the current market crisis; (3) the impact of these developments on other markets and asset classes. UBS is not under any obligation to (and expressly disclaims any such obligation to) update or alter its forward-looking statements whether as a result of new information, future events, or otherwise.

About Our Wealth Management Services

As a firm providing wealth management services to clients, UBS Financial Services, Inc is registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as an investment adviser and a broker-dealer, offering both investment advisory and brokerage services. Investment advisory services and brokerage services are separate and distinct, differ in material ways and are governed by different laws and separate agreements. It is important that investors understand the ways in which UBS conducts business, that they carefully read the agreements and disclosures that UBS provides to them about the products or services offered. A small number of UBS financial advisors are not permitted to offer advisory services to you, and can only work with investors directly as UBS broker-dealer representatives. Your financial advisor will let you know if this is the case and, if you desire advisory services, will refer you to another financial advisor who can help you. UBS' agreements and disclosures will inform investors about whether we and our financial advisors are acting in our capacity as an investment adviser or broker-dealer. For more information, please see www.ubs.com/workingwithus. In providing financial planning services, UBS may act as a broker-dealer or investment adviser, depending on whether we charge a fee for the service. The nature and scope of the services are detailed in the documents and reports provided to you as part of the service.
